

Characteristics, Pitting:

Pitting characteristics is using your character's characteristic score against another's characteristics score (i.e., Awareness, Charisma, Constitution, Coordination, Dexterity, Intelligence, Mental-Strength, Strength and Wisdom).

The G.M. will most always ask you to add a certain characteristic to your % dice-roll when pitting yourself against another, whether it be a contest of strength or mind against mind, to see who is quicker, etc.

This method of winning a contest against another, or overcoming certain events and happenings, is used a lot in this gaming system.

The following are examples of pitting characteristics:

Strength vs. Strength

Player: "I've got a hold of this giant wolf. Now, I'm going to pin it . . . so it is helpless. I don't want to kill it. I'm going to take it to the gladiators arena and see how much I can get for it."

G.M.: "You are in "Battle-Lock", so you can try. Pit your Strength against it. It will get a +5 added to the dice-roll because its strength is 30, and yours is 25 . . . roll."

Player: "I rolled a 73, beat that!"

G.M.: "63 +5 equals a 68. Okay, you have subdued it. Nice, you did it."

Mental-strength vs. Mental-strength

Player: "I'm going to cast "Chaotic Reality" on him.

G.M.: Okay, pit your Mental-strength against its Mental-strength." You will gain a +17 on the roll; your mental-strength is higher."

Player: "87 +17 is 104, beat that!"

G.M.: "23, creature loses. What did you want to do to it?"

Player: "Well, seeming it's a goblin, and I do know some things about those freaks, I'll become one of its superiors . . . I'll make it perceive I am a Hoard Commander and start ripping into it verbally."

G.M.: "Okay, it begins to grovel like a sniveling, whimpering, coward. Well done"

Coordination vs. Awareness

Player: “I want to sneak past the guard. I can’t fight her. She’s way too powerful.”

G.M.: “Roll your % dice and add your coordination to the roll. I’ll add the guard’s awareness to my roll to see if she notices you.”

Player: “I rolled a $67 + 27$ coordination is a 94.”

G.M.: “I rolled a $45 + 35$ awareness is a 80. You manage to slip past her without being noticed. You got lucky.”
